Information Technology

Learners should know that technology is everywhere, be able to identify the technology they encounter and have a growing understanding of how it works.

We have broken down this part of computing into activities for word processing, spreadsheets and data handling, presentation, ebook creation, web design, animation, video creation, photography and art, sound and AR & VR.

Learners also need to know how to store and organise their files online and locally so that it can easily be found again.

Computer Science

Computer science has been broken down into three strands: Computational Thinking, Programming and Computer Networks.

Computational Thinking is all about solving problems effectively with or without a computer. Computational thinking is about looking at a problem in a way in which a computer can help us to solve it. This is a two-step process:

1. First, we think about the sequence of steps (an algorithm) needed to solve a problem
2. Then, we use our technical skills to get the computer working on the problem as we implement our algorithm as code. As demonstrated with Dr Chips' support videos, many of these objectives can be applied across the curriculum.

Programming is one application of computational thinking. Learners will write algorithms and implement these as code. They also need to be able to find mistakes and fix them (debugging.) Once learners have created a program, they need to learn to evaluate and look at different ways to achieve the same goal and which method is most appropriate.

As learners get older, the programs they write will become more complex using a range of constructs such as sequence, selection, repetition and variables in their programs.

KS 2 pupils also require knowledge of networks, such as the Internet, work and how searches are performed.

Digital Literacy

All of the statements from this document have been taken from the Education for a Connected World Document.

Today's children and young people are growing up in a digital world.

As they grow older, it is crucial that they learn to balance the benefits offered by technology with a critical awareness of their own and other's online behaviour, and develop effective strategies for staying safe and making a positive contribution online.

This framework describes the skills and understanding that children and young people should have the opportunity to develop at different ages and stages. It highlights what a child should know in terms of current online technology, its influence on behaviour and development, and what skills they need to be able to navigate it safely.
